> "SAMPLE I grabbed two on Tuesday and honestly they were the best part of a long week, the crunch held up even after the bag sat open on my desk for an afternoon, but the salt level was a little high for me and I would want a smaller bag for the price I think they charge at the store on Broadway near the office, maybe a multipack would work better for us."

What we learned

- SAMPLE Offices F and H ran out before day 5 even after top-ups; size units to Tuesday headcount more closely.
- SAMPLE Seven people said it was gone by the time they looked, so supply, not interest, limited trial in two offices.
- SAMPLE Some people read the QR as a reorder link; the card could say "three questions, 20 seconds".

Recommendation SAMPLE Renew into offices A, F and H with 20% more units each, and add two new offices. Keep the card; add "three questions, 20 seconds" beside the QR.

Limitations

Each number is a separate step, counted as stated, and none of them is a sale. Delivered: our count at handoff. Placed: units visible in the placement photo; an office may hold some back for later. Depleted: from photos or the pantry owner's count by day 5; one person may take several, and sharing and disposal are invisible. Tuesday headcount: a range the office reports; not everyone visits the pantry. Survey responses: anonymous and self-selected, from small samples, so one answer can move a share by several points. A QR scan is curiosity, not intent. Code redemptions: reported by the brand; some of those people would have bought anyway. Retailer sales, where shown, are confounded by everything else that happened that month and are suggestive only. Incremental purchases were not measured, so this report does not show whether the campaign caused any sale.
