Office call card

Desk Drop · 20 minutes · weeks 1 to 3: no selling · full guide: calls/office-call-guide.md

#	Ask exactly (plan wording)	Min	Capture
1	How does your pantry work today? Who chooses, who delivers, how often, and roughly what does it cost a month?	4	who decides, who delivers (snack service Y/N), how often, cost a month (number only if given); pantry owner's name and title if it comes up
2	How many people are actually in on a Tuesday?	1	Tuesday number (low end of a range) + their words
3	Do brands ever reach out offering free product? What happens when they do?	2	do brands reach out (Y/N); ignore / accept / block, and why
4	If a vetted emerging brand showed up with 50 units and a card explaining it, what would you need to say yes? What would make you say no?	4	what yes needs; what no means; objection codes; vetoes; security desk, certificate, freight hours
5	Would you take a photo of it on the shelf and post a three-question survey link in Slack?	2	Y / N / maybe + words
6	Frame first: "One hypothetical question, and it changes nothing about the free drop." Then word for word: "If this goes well and we offered a guaranteed twice-monthly curated drop of products your team voted for, would that have a budget? Roughly what range per month?"	2	silence after reading it; never suggest a number; verbatim; low and high USD a month; no budget = 0; don't know = blank
7	Who else runs a pantry nearby that I should talk to?	1	company and title; "may I say you suggested it?"

Open (30 s)

Who you are; you are looking at whether free emerging brands, in exchange for two shelf photos and three survey questions, would help offices; not selling today; seven questions, 20 minutes, OK to take notes?

Close (3 min)

If positive: "If we did a first drop, who would receive it, and what's a good window on a Tuesday or Wednesday morning?" Then: "Can I send you a one-pager?" Ask before ever quoting them (no name, no company). Stop on time.

Gate 0 counts this office only if yes_in_principle = Y and pantry owner named and receiving window named. "I need to ask facilities or HR" = maybe. A later N or maybe takes the yes back.

Say only what is true today

No brands yet. First drop planned for [DROP DATE: Tue 2027-01-12], only once five offices and the first brands sign. No fees either way. Sealed, labeled products; allergen line from the package. Anonymous survey, no employee details. Insurance: "we will carry it before your first drop".

Never

Employee names or details. Photos of people. A health claim. A date, brand or office count the tracker does not show.

After (10 min)

Brand call card

Desk Drop · 20 to 30 minutes · weeks 1 to 3: no selling · full guide: calls/brand-call-guide.md

#	Ask exactly (plan wording)	Min	Capture
1	How are you getting people to try the product right now? What is working and what is not?	4	what they do now; what has not worked
2	What do you spend on sampling or field marketing a quarter, and who signs off on it?	3	USD a quarter (low, high); who approves; controls_budget = Y only if they approve alone
3	Have you ever seeded offices? What happened?	2	Y / N + what happened
4	If I could put 500 units into 10 Flatiron offices in one week, within walking distance of Whole Foods Union Square, with placement photos and employee feedback, what would that be worth to you? Let them name a number before you mention $1,500.	5	their number + words FIRST; convert to one 500-unit, 10-office campaign; then the $1,500 line and their answer
5	What would the report need to show for you to do it again?	3	photos, depletion, words, scans, codes; 'sales lift' = objection want_sales_data
6	Where can someone buy you within ten blocks of Madison Square Park?	2	store + street, or online with a code; compare with Clay's grade
7	What would stop you: budget timing, inventory, shelf life, something else?	3	each stopper as an objection code

Open (30 s)

Who you are; testing an idea (a week in a handful of New York offices, photos and feedback, near their stores); not asking them to buy today; a price question is coming, and their number comes first; seven questions, about 25 minutes.

The anchor rule

Ask Q4, then wait. "I'll tell you, but I'd like your number first." Write it. Then: "For reference, the standard price I'm testing is $1,500 for ten offices. How does that land?" Founding price only if asked: five offices for $600, paid up front, $120 an office for the next two campaigns; in return, if it runs as promised, a short note from them that we can publish with a case study.

Gate 0 counts this brand only if the higher of the two numbers is $500 or more and the speaker controls the budget alone. A later call with no budget control or a lower number takes it back.

Weeks 4 to 7: the seven checks

1 sealed, shelf-stable, 60+ days at the drop · 2 ingredients and nine allergens on the label · 3 store within ten blocks or online code · 4 ship 275 units to one Manhattan address in ten business days · 5 product liability of $1M per occurrence, us as additional insured · 6 approves $600 alone · 7 why New York now. Excluded: alcohol, cannabis/CBD/THC, supplements, refrigerated, preparation, health claims.

Say only what is true today

No offices signed until the tracker says so; no results yet ("I'd rather tell you that than make up a number"); no sales guarantee; no free trial; no employee data.

After (10 min)

Note_Brand tab, row to paste, Clay write-back. Close: "Who else should I be talking to?", "Can I send you the details once the first offices have said yes, probably the week of November 16?" (next_action_date Mon 2026-11-16), and permission before ever quoting them.
